London Calling: Chariot Launches in First European City As Service Expands Internationally

All around the world, cities are asking themselves a similar question: How do we make it easier, cleaner and more efficient for our citizens to get around?

At Ford, we are committed to helping cities everywhere make it easier for people to move, reliably and comfortably and in a way that gets unnecessary vehicles off the roads.

That's why we're launching our Chariot commuter service in London—marking the first step in the shuttle service's expansion beyond the United States, as well as Chariot's first city of operation in Europe.
